

The Aurora Project, Inc.
Admission Process

The first inquiry for admission includes an evaluation of what types of services are needed. Referrals for emergency housing, crisis intervention and other assistance will be made at that time.

If a caller is in fact seeking transitional housing, a phone triage assessment is completed. This conversation identifies the prospective resident's current situation and needs. At this time our program is explained in detail including the commitment of time, and a description of our services. If a client is found appropriate for our program during this question and answer session, a face to face meeting is arranged. Potential residents must be drug free for a minimum of 30 days and verifiably stable on any medication for 30 days.

During the intake appointment, details of the potential resident's situation are discussed. The potential resident is given a list of documents needed for admission and given a time frame to obtain the appropriate paperwork. Once we receive this information, a final determination is made and an admission move-in date is given. The admission process to the Aurora Project Inc. takes approximately 2-4 weeks. Continued contact with potential residents occurs throughout this process.
